Dear Community Members and Partners,

ElderSAFE™ Center, a program of Charles E. Smith Life Communities, created this Community Resource Guide to assist older adults aging in place. This guide is designed to help community members—and the professionals, volunteers, family members, caregivers, faith and cultural leaders assisting them—to more easily connect to vital community resources. When older adults have appropriate services to meet their needs, they enjoy improved overall health and well-being.

We hope you will share this guide widely, especially through the Village Movement and the Maryland Community for Life Program. The Village Movement has been instrumental in supporting community members as they age in place, offering services including: transportation, assistance with household tasks and social activities. The Maryland Community for Life Program delivers key services to allow older adults to remain independent in their own homes, including transportation, home maintenance and resource referrals.

As ElderSAFE Center proudly celebrates its fifth year milestone, providing safe temporary shelter, education and advocacy on behalf of abused, neglected and financially exploited older adults, we are indebted to the community for entrusting us to carry out this vital mission of helping older adults age safely and with dignity. My heartfelt thanks to my valued team members Sydney Palinkas, community educator, who spearheaded the creation of this resource guide and provides vital community education to protect older adults, and KerryAnn Aleibar, program manager, who directs our client shelter and essential helpline services.

May our next five years be as fruitful in impacting the lives of all we aspire to serve as we respond to the vital and ever growing need to help older adults age in place safely and healthfully.

Warmest regards,

Tovah Kasdin
Director, ElderSAFE Center

ElderSAFE™ Center

ElderSAFE was established in 2014 as a comprehensive healthcare-based elder abuse prevention center serving abused, neglected and financially exploited older adults from Maryland, Washington D.C. and Northern Virginia. An award-winning program of Charles E. Smith Life Communities, ElderSAFE works in close collaboration with community partners to build a strong and effective response to elder abuse across our region.

- Language-Accessible Helpline: ElderSAFE receives referrals for temporary shelter and requests for community resources.
- Temporary Shelter: ElderSAFE provides safe temporary shelter and medical, therapeutic and counseling services in our long-term care and independent living residences to eligible older adults who have been abused, neglected or financially exploited.

- Education: ElderSAFE provides free training to multidisciplinary professionals including medical, social service, legal, first responders, faith leaders and community members to recognize and respond appropriately to abuse, neglect and financial exploitation.
- Advocacy: ElderSAFE advocates to improve systems and laws to protect older adults from abuse, neglect and financial exploitation.

To make a referral or request a free training, call the ElderSAFE language accessible helpline: 301-816-5099 (Monday - Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.)

Understanding Elder Abuse

WHAT IS ELDER ABUSE?

Elder abuse is the mistreatment of older adults, which can occur in any setting including the home, community or a facility. Older adults, and adults living with disabilities, often referred to as “vulnerable adults,” can be harmed in the following ways:

- Physical Abuse: Physical force (such as hitting or pushing) which may cause pain, harm or physical injury; inappropriate use of medications or physical restraints.
- Sexual Abuse: Any type of non-consensual sexual act.
- Psychological Abuse: Mistreatment that affects emotional or mental health including intimidation, threats, humiliation, belittlement or isolation.
- Financial Exploitation: Exploitation or misuse of an older person’s money, property or resources.
- Neglect: Willful deprivation of basic needs, including food, clothing, shelter, medication or personal hygiene.
- Self-Neglect: The inability to provide for one’s own physical or psychological needs which causes risk to the person’s health or safety.

WHY IS IT IMPORTANT TO DISCUSS ELDER ABUSE?

Elder abuse affects five million people every year in the United States, yet it is often not discussed openly. Many people experiencing abuse remain silent and do not share their experiences because they are ashamed, afraid or simply do not know what to do or how to reach out for help. The reality is that one in 10 older adults is abused in their homes, but only one in 24 cases is reported.

Financial exploitation is even more prevalent but disclosed less frequently; only one in 44 cases of financial exploitation is reported. With growing frequency, scammers try to exploit older adults so they can gain access to their finances. This can occur by pretending to be a “caring” friend, caregiver, romantic partner or falsely posing as someone from a government or charitable organization. In times of national emergencies, like the COVID-19 pandemic, scams surge as fraudsters capitalize on individual and community fears. Given this reality, it is very likely that there are older adults living in our communities who are experiencing abuse and might be in need of assistance.

HOW DOES ELDER ABUSE OCCUR?

Elder abuse generally occurs within a relationship where there is an expectation of trust. People committing this abuse are often the ones closest to the older adult such as a spouse or partner, family member, friend, caregiver or stranger who forms a relationship of trust.

HOW DOES ELDER ABUSE AFFECT OLDER ADULTS?

Elder abuse significantly affects a person’s quality of life. Older adults who have experienced abuse, neglect or financial exploitation have a 300 percent higher risk of pre-mature death than those who have not experienced abuse. They are three times more likely to be admitted to the hospital and four times more likely to be admitted to a nursing home. This is due to the devastating effects that elder abuse has on the physical and mental health of victims.

Elder abuse victims are more likely to experience:

- Depression
- Sleep disturbances
- Anxiety
- Exacerbation of pre-existing conditions
- Increased mental impairment
- Isolation and loneliness
- Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome
- Decreased self-confidence
- Malnutrition and dehydration

Elder Abuse Prevention

Older adults aging in place, especially those living alone, can take preventative steps to protect themselves and those they care about from harm by learning the signs of abuse and staying connected to resources in their communities. Everyone can play a role in preventing and intervening in cases of elder abuse.

REDUCING SOCIAL ISOLATION:

Healthy relationships, fulfilling interests and community involvement are important for both mental and physical health. New studies have shown that loneliness is worse for your health than smoking or obesity. Being socially isolated can lead to feelings of depression, anxiety, loss of appetite, sleep disruption and other mental and physical health issues. Social isolation can also greatly increase someone’s vulnerability to abuse.

Being connected to family and friends or civic, faith or cultural communities can increase a sense of belonging and reduce feelings of loneliness. Older adults can get involved by volunteering with a local Village, community center or faith or cultural group. Consider reaching out to those in your community who appear isolated. A simple phone call or offering a social invitation can make a big difference.

CAREGIVING - KNOWING WHEN TO ASK FOR HELP

A caregiver supports someone who cannot fully care for themselves. A caregiver's responsibility varies depending on the person's needs, ranging from helping with chores a few hours a week to round-the-clock medical support. Caregivers can be family members, spouses, partners, neighbors or paid professionals. Some individuals may have a combination of paid and unpaid caregivers to support their needs.

Caregiving is a big commitment and is often not planned. Care needs can be complex and ongoing. Caregivers may experience stress and financial hardship due to their role as caregivers. They may lack knowledge, resources and time to adequately provide care. These factors can put the older or vulnerable adult at risk.

It may be time to ask for help, if someone's role as a caregiver has caused:

- A significant lack of sleep
- Changes to eating patterns and health
- Stress, worry, anxiety, depression
- Financial issues/a loss of income
- Conflicts in relationships

If you or someone you know is a caregiver in need of assistance, it is important to reach out for help.

Addressing Abuse, Neglect and Financial Exploitation

RECOGNIZING ABUSE:

Depending on your personal and professional roles, you may interact closely with older adults in your community and have the ability to detect abuse earlier than others. When everyone knows the warning signs of abuse and how to report, older adults can receive services and reach safety much sooner.

Knowing the warning signs of elder abuse is essential for early intervention. Consider whether the older or vulnerable adult:

- Is fearful of their caregiver or someone in their life.
- Is isolated or lonely, not able to participate in their usual social activities and/or prevented from interacting with people privately.
- Is emotionally distressed, such as crying, agitation, depression, anxiety.
- Exhibits poor hygiene, such as soiled clothing or offensive body odor.
- Exhibits unexplained bruises, burns, cuts or welts.
- Is very worried about money—unable to pay for their daily living expenses and/or they are in debt and they aren't sure why.

BARRIERS TO REACHING HELP AND REPORTING ABUSE:

Elder abuse is an extremely underreported issue. One reason is older adults face many barriers to reaching help and reporting the abuse they experience.

- The older adult may not know this treatment is abusive: Many people learn about relationships from those in their family and community. Unfortunately, those aren't always healthy or respectful models. Therefore, the older adult might not recognize these behaviors as signs of abuse.

- Fear: The older adult might be afraid of retaliation from the person hurting them or others in the family.
- Shame: Unfortunately, victims of all ages experience shame and stigma. This shame may be enhanced for older adults who are harmed by adult children or grandchildren.
- Dependency: The older adult may be dependent on the person hurting them. Their abuser may be their main caregiver, and they may fear that by reporting the abuse they will lose that help.
- Worried about the abuser: The older adult may want the abuse to stop but still deeply care for the person hurting them. They may worry that the person will be punished or taken away if they report.
- Cognitive impairment: If the older adult has a cognitive impairment, they may not be able to express what is happening to them. Additionally, the reports of those with cognitive impairments may be ignored or dismissed.

HOW CAN YOU HELP TO REDUCE THESE BARRIERS?

If you have reason to believe that an older or vulnerable adult is experiencing abuse, neglect or financial exploitation, the most important thing you can do is to be supportive and empathetic. Having this conversation is sometimes difficult. Regardless, if you suspect that an older or vulnerable adult is being abused or mistreated, you should call Adult Protective Services (APS) to discuss your concerns.

Here are some tips and recommendation for this conversation:

- Be in a safe place: Safety means different things to different people, but find a private location where the person feels comfortable. Avoid talking when the person's family members or caregivers are present, as the older adult may not feel comfortable disclosing abuse in the presence of others.

- Be non-judgmental: Unfortunately, many victims of abuse feel shame and embarrassment about their experiences. Never place blame on the person for choices they have made. It is also important to remember that most abuse is committed by a close family member or loved one. The older adult might still love and deeply care for the person hurting them. Try not to add your own judgments or feelings to the situation.
- Believe them: When someone begins telling you their story, it is critical to let them know that you believe them. Many victims remain silent because they fear that they will not be believed. Additionally, do not discount the reports of individuals with dementia or other impairments.
- Remember there is no 'right' way to react to abuse: Everyone reacts differently to traumatic experiences. Some people cry. Others are angry and frustrated. Some want to share all the details of their experience. Others are quiet and withdrawn.
- Let them know the abuse is not their fault: Abusers often blame victims for the abuse or minimize their experiences. It is important to let the person know that they have the right not to be mistreated.
- Remember your role: It is not your job to investigate the case. If someone discloses abuse to you, you should report it to the police or Adult Protective Services (APS).

REPORTING

You should call Adult Protective Services (APS) if you are concerned that an older or vulnerable adult:

- Is no longer able to provide for their own physical and mental health needs.
- Is being mistreated, harmed, neglected or financially exploited.
- Is at risk because they and/or their caregiver need additional services.

There are times when you may feel conflicted about reporting. You may be concerned about someone's welfare but may also be hesitant about taking action for fear of putting your personal relationships at risk. It is important to know that when reporting, you will not be required to disclose your name; you can report anonymously. Adult Protective Services (APS) will always keep your identity confidential and never share who made the report.

WHAT WILL ADULT PROTECTIVE SERVICES DO?

When making a referral to Adult Protective Services (APS), you will be asked some information about the person you are concerned about, such as basic demographic information and the reason for your concern. Adult Protective Services (APS) will assess the case and decide the best next steps to assist the older or vulnerable adult. Adult Protective Services (APS) can arrange for counseling, medical services, legal services and emergency placement.

Thank you for using this Community Resource Guide. We hope you found these resources useful. We want to make sure this information stays up to date. Please email eldersafeinfo@ceslc.org with any updates or changes to the above resources.

It takes a community to safeguard older adults from abuse, neglect and financial exploitation and everyone has a vital role to play. The most important thing to remember is if you are concerned about an older or vulnerable adult's welfare you should say something as soon as possible and connect them to appropriate resources, so they can stay safe, healthy and happy aging in place.
